

A ROMANCE.

They "Fell Out" Some Forty-Five Years Ago.

The Husband Drifts Away, Marries and Settles in Michigan.

Where He Accumulates a Fortune—The Wife Marries Another—In Course of Time Both Become Single—Second Meeting and a Second Wedding.

KENT, O., Nov. 16.—One of the greatest romances that Kent ever had was brought to light here Tuesday. Forty-five years ago Samuel Smith and wife, who at that time lived in Shreve township, got into a little family difficulty and parted. Mr. Smith, being of a proud disposition, would not humble himself to return. He has wandered all over the United States and South America, spending most of his time west of the Mississippi river. He is a cooper by trade. At the time of the war he entered the army, and some time in 1866 applied for a pension, and about two weeks ago received all his back pension, amounting to over $5,000, with which he bought a home in Hamilton, Mich., where he has been living for the greater part of the last two years with his sister, Mrs. Welland, and his niece, Mrs. Sears. He was married, and has a son living in Chicago. His second wife died, and he took to roaming again. He is now 71 years of age, and was about 26 when he left his first wife, by whom he had three children, two of which died and the third was not born when he went away.

The child lived and was married to Dr. J. D. Davis, a prominent physician and resident of this place. Mrs. Davis never saw her father until last Saturday. Mrs. Smith lived single for a number of years and patiently waited for his return, but believing him dead she secured a divorce and married George Risk and passed a very unhappy life with him until his death about eight years ago, there being no children from this union. Since the death of her second husband, Mrs. Risk has lived with her daughter. She was visiting in the country, was sent for and their meeting was like a couple of young lovers that had been kept from seeing each other for a long time. They left Tuesday morning for Akron, where they will again be joined in wedlock, this time it is hoped forever. They returned Tuesday evening as jolly as two school children, and when last seen were going to the residence of their daughter, hand in hand.

Will Be Strictly Conservative.
WASHINGTON, Nov. 16.—It was announced at the White House Tuesday that the president has decided to pursue a strictly conservative course in all matters relating to appointments. He does not desire to lay the administration open to the charge of arbitrarily depriving the incoming administration of patronage in a spirit of vindictiveness or retaliation. Consequently he will extend the classified service only to a half dozen positions in each department. This decision he had arrived at before the campaign. The government printing office will not be placed under civil service rules.

JACK CHINN.

The Noted Turfman Shot While Fighting With a Track Officer.

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 16.—Col. Jack Chinn, the starter at the East St. Louis race-track, and one of the best known turfmen in the west, was shot and dangerously wounded at the track by Capt. D. Anthony, who has charge of the police force at that place. Chinn was removed to St. Mary's hospital, and the ball was removed from the fleshy part of the neck, where it had lodged. The shooting took place near the office of Secretary Sinclair, under the grand stand, and was the result of Chinn's anger upon being served by that official with a written notice that his services as starter would be dispensed with. Chinn has acted as starter at the track since it was opened last February.

He was met by Sinclair, who handed him a letter stating at the same time that it was a notice that his services were no longer wanted. Upon hearing this, Chinn did not wait to tear open the envelope, but in a rage threw it upon the floor, saying: "No man can discharge me!" At the same time he reached out with one hand, and grasped Sinclair by the coat, pulling him toward him. With his disengaged hand Chinn had pulled a vicious looking knife, and apparently he was about to wreak his wrath upon the secretary. Sinclair had told several officers of the intention of the association to remove Chinn, and the fact that he was to serve the notice upon him and feared trouble. Capt. Anthony and his men, who had been given the warning, were therefore keeping a close watch upon the redoubtable Kentuckian, and when he made the assault upon Secretary Sinclair, they were in the vicinity and sprang forward to prevent further trouble. At this point accounts of the subsequent affair differ. Chinn's friends claim that one of the officers struck the horseman over the head with a club while another one held him, and that as he continued to struggle for his release, Capt. Anthony, who had drawn his revolver, placed it to Chinn's head and fired. The struggling man dodged at that moment and the bullet entered the face on the right side, ranging backward and downward and lodging in the neck.

Without uttering a word Chinn dropped to the floor unconscious. The statement made by the other side is to the effect that Capt. Anthony, drawing his revolver, seized Chinn by the arm when he assaulted Secretary Sinclair, and that the Kentuckian shouted: "No man can draw a gun on me." With this the enraged man made a rush at Secretary Sinclair, but the movement was cut short by Capt. Anthony raising his revolver and discharging it full in Chinn's face, causing him to fall insensible to the floor.

A Brave Lad.
WILKESBARR, Pa., Nov. 16.—While the parents of Geo. Totten, a 10-year-old boy living near here, were away from home Monday night, his three sisters, aged 7, 4 and 2, upset a lamp while at play. The lamp fell into the baby's crib. The baby in its fright rolled out of the crib just as the flames burst forth. George snatched the baby and the other little ones and rushed out of the house. His clothes caught fire, but he rolled in the grass, putting out the flames. He is terribly burned and may die. His heroic deed is the talk of the neighborhood.

Do Not Know Diphtheria Is Contagious!
COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 16.—Secretary Probst, of the state board of health, returned Tuesday morning from New London, where he went to investigate the diphtheria epidemic. He traced the origin of the epidemic to the visit of a lady there last August with a sick child that undoubtedly had diphtheria. Since then there have been 70 cases and 17 deaths. Secretary Probst says that four out of the five physicians in the place hold that diphtheria is not contagious, and that, therefore, there is no need of disinfection and quarantine.

An Accident on the B. & O. Road.
GRAFTON, W. Va., Nov. 16.—The Chicago express on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad, westbound, was wrecked near here Tuesday morning. There was no loss of life. Both tracks were torn up and travel was delayed eight hours. The two Pullman sleeping cars attached to the train were damaged, one sliding down an embankment and turning over on its side. The accident was caused by the breaking of the splice bar, allowing the entire train to leave the track.

Upp has not been heard from.

THE POISONER.

Thomas Neil Cream Hanged in Newgate Prison.

This Modern Borgia Drugged Abandoned Women For Amusement.

He Plies His Terrible Pastime on Two Continents—The End of One of the Most Heartless Wretches of This Century—He is Game to the End.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—The execution of Thomas Neil Cream took place within the walls of Newgate Gaol Tuesday morning.

The murderer can scarcely be said to have been resigned to his fate, yet he had little hope of a reprieve. Monday night he retired to bed at 11 o'clock and slept for some hours soundly. He was awakened at 6 o'clock and partook of a light breakfast. The prison chaplain called at the condemned man's cell before the meal was finished, but the prisoner paid slight heed to his ministrations.

Cream was taciturn and reserved, showing that he had steeled himself to meet his death without any display of emotion. Emerging from the warm corridors of the jail, Cream shivered when he came in contact with the cold, chilly blast of the morning air, and the solemn toll of the bell of St. Sepulchre's church seemed for a moment to discompose him, but in that instant he proceeded again, walking erect and firmly to the scaffold.

Once there the hangman pinioned the culprit's legs with leathern straps, and then placed the white cap over his face and the noose around his neck, drawing the loop so that the eyelet hole came close to the convict's left ear. Then going quickly to the corner of the shed, the hangman drew the bolts, the hollow flooring underneath gave way, and with a jerk he fell the full extent of the hangman's rope, a slight quivering of the cord, one or two spasmodic jerks, and the most callous prisoner of modern times had paid the penalty of his brutal crime.

The body was buried under the flagstones in the corridor through which Neil had passed but a short time before on his way to the scaffold. The grave was not opened until after the execution, when a flagstone was lifted close to the spot where Mrs. Piercy, the murderer of her paramour's wife and child, were buried.

The corridor of Newgate is perhaps the most ghastly spot in the world. Under the flagging of this corridor have been buried the bodies of a long succession of notable and obscure criminals.

Neil's whole life seemed to be one of crime. He came to America from Scotland, where he was born in 1850; he lived in Canada, where he obtained a physician's diploma. His first crime was in subjecting a young woman to a criminal surgical operation. He afterwards married her, deserting her the same day. He was compelled to flee from London, Ont., because of the poisoning of a young woman.

In Chicago, whither Cream went, he was arrested on suspicion of killing a young Indiana girl whom he had treated. He was acquitted, but subsequently convicted of poisoning a railway official, who was subject to epileptic fits, and whose life Cream tried to insure. He was sentenced to life imprisonment for this crime but after serving a long term of years the sentence was commuted to seven years, and five years ago Cream was released. From Chicago Cream went to Canada and thence to England, where he began the series of crimes resulting in his execution.

His first victim was a social outcast named Matilda Clover, whom Cream poisoned with strychnine pills. Her death was attributed to delirium tremens. She died October 21, 1891. Subsequently Helen Donworth fell in the street, stricken in the same way as the Clover woman. Her case was set down as a mystery. Not until April of this year were there any more cases, when Alice Marsh and her companion, Emma Schrieff, fell shrieking at 118 Stamford street. Both died, and enough strychnine to kill six people was found in their stomachs. A detective who had been in the search of the murderer of Matilda Clover ingratiated himself into Cream's confidence and by his skill succeeded in inducing Cream to talk of the murders. Cream showed great familiarity with the crimes, but fastened the guilt upon Mr. Harper, a medical student, whom he attempted to blackmail. The upshot of it was Cream himself got into prison. Poison was found in his lodgings, together with the names of the women who had died so mysteriously.

One woman whom Cream had failed to poison gave much important testimony against him. Blackmailing letters, charging prominent people with the crime, were traced to Cream. Bishop Katzer After Secret Societies. DUNQUE, Ia., Nov. 16.—Bishop Katzer, of Milwaukee, will present to the convention of Archbishops which assembles in New York Wednesday the petition of the German Catholic Central society of the United States, adopted here in September, that the term "secret societies" be denounced in plain and unmistakable terms. This petition is aimed at the Knights of Pythias, the United Workmen and other societies without spiritual direction profiting by the liberality of the church, while in consequence of this liberality the benevolent societies which have placed themselves under the direction of the church have not prospered to a corresponding degree.

BLUE BIRD.

Dies at the "Door of Hope"—Her Rescue From a Life of Sin.

NEW YORK, Nov. 16.—There is mourning in the "Door of Hope" mission, at No. 102 East Sixty-first street, over the death of Della Loughlin, a young woman, who, until she was rescued by Mrs. Whittemore from the slums in May, 1891, was known in Mulberry Bend as the worst drinker, fighter and opium smoker in the district. She was called "Blue Bird" and after she was converted and became a remarkably efficient city missionary herself, she kept and was proud of the title. She was a young woman of strong personality and great natural eloquence, and the records of the city missions show that she converted more than 100 men and women in the year that she was able to go about and lecture.

The frightful dissipation she had indulged in brought on hasty consumption, and she has been at death's door for the last six months.

Many of her old acquaintances went to the Door of Hope to see her, Monday, and her white coffin was covered with the flowers they brought. Funeral services were held there at 11 o'clock Tuesday and additional services were held at 9 o'clock in the evening at the chapel, No. 63 Park street, that those ashamed to air their poverty and degradation in the up-town district could have a chance to take a look at "Blue Bird."

The Government Commission Visits the Battlefield to Lay Out Stations and Boulevards.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Nov. 16.—Gen. Fullerton and Stewart and Col. Kellogg, of the Chickamauga park commission, have arrived in this city, accompanied by a stenographer and government engineer. The object of their visit at this time is to lay out parks and stations and boulevards along Mission ridge from Rossville Gap to the Chickamauga river. After a visit to the ground the commission has decided to recommend to the secretary of war the purchase of Sherman's hill, at the head of the ridge, which includes the fortifications thrown up by Gen. Sherman. Wednesday the commission will be joined by commissions from ten of the Ohio regiments, whose regimental locations on the Chickamauga battlefield are in dispute, and an effort will be made to decide upon the points in dispute.

A carriage was procured and the trio were driven over to Jeffersonville, where Kiesel was compelled to marry the young lady.
